Working Papers

11. Recommendation Quality and the Concentration of Consumption: Experimental Evidence from Netflix
(w/ Winston Chou, Kevin Zielnicki, Antoine Scheid, Allen Tran, Nathan Kallus); Draft
Short Abstract: Using an experiment on Netflix's RecSys, we show that improvements in recommender system technology disperses consumption from a small number of superstar titles to a larger number of middle-tail titles, with minimal effects on the long-tail.
12. Digital News Consumption: Evidence from Smartphone Content in the 2024 U.S. Elections
(w/ Tevel Dekel, Rafael Jimenez-Duran, Ro'ee Levy, Lena Song); Draft
Revision Requested, Science Advances
Best Paper, 2026 Asian Econometric Society Meetings (AMES-CSW)
Short Abstract: Using novel smartphone content data, we find that the median American consumes little election-related content with heterogeneity across individuals. Despite finding heterogeneity in election-related content across different applications, a variance decomposition exercise shows that this is largely due to differences across individuals, not the applications they use.
13. The Informational Role of Online Recommendations: Evidence from a Field Experiment on MovieLens
(w/ Duarte Gonçalves, Ruoyan Kong, Daniel Kluver, Joseph Konstan); Draft
Conference Version: Extended Abstract at ACM Economics and Computation (2023)

Short Abstract: We conduct a longitudinal field experiment on the movie recommendation platform MovieLens where we randomize the set of recommended movies and elicit beliefs about unseen movies. We use the data to decompose the influence that online recommendations have on consumption choices in terms of their informational and product discovery value.

14. Semiparametric inference on identification sets in choice modeling

(w/ Jia Wan, Antoine Scheid, Nathan Kallus, Aurelien Bibaut); Draft

Short Abstract: Counterfactuals under mixed logit choice models are generally not point-identified without restrictions on the distribution of preference heterogeneity across individuals. We provide sharp confidence bounds on the identified set with unrestricted preference heterogeneity.

15. Guided Creativity: AI Intermediation for Enhancing Originality and Quality in Visual Design

(w/ Xuekang Wu (first author), Artem Timoshenko); Draft

Short Abstract: We explore how generative models can serve as intermediaries in facilitating high quality visual design in a logo design contest setting. Compared to traditional open or blind contests, we show that a variant of the open contest where the presented logos are generative variations leads to similar quality improvements from open compared to blind contests, but mitigates the fixation typically associated with open contests by inducing a more diverse set of designs.
